ABOUT COTOPAXI

Gear for Good®

Lasting gear, lasting impact. Our Gear for Good® promise is to make durable gear as sustainably and ethically as possible. It's also our commitment to donate at least 1% of our revenue to help communities experiencing poverty.

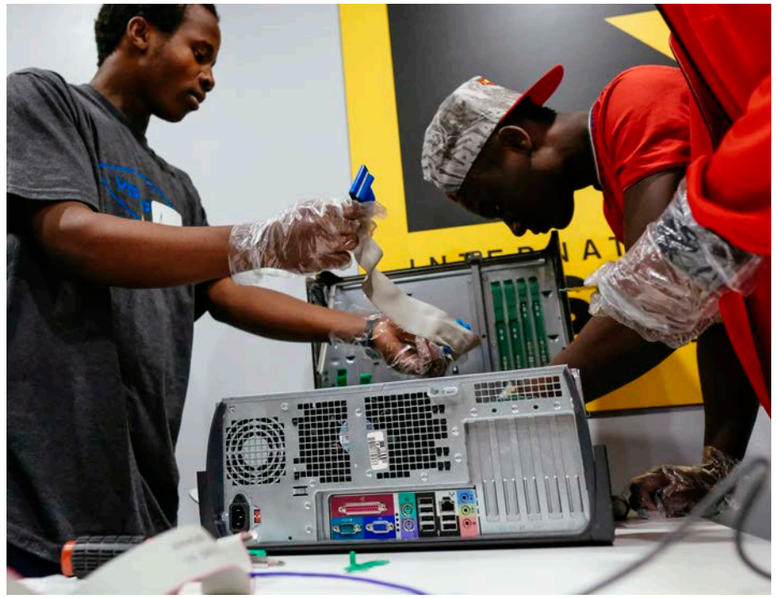

In 2013, we set out to build an outdoor gear company that would serve as a vehicle to fight extreme poverty. Today, drawing on best practices from the outdoor industry and sustainable development sector, we equip the curious with innovative gear to adventure out and build a more equitable world together.

Every year, we direct at least 1% of our revenue to the Cotopaxi Foundation. Launched in 2019, the Foundation awards grants to nonprofits working to improve health, education, and livelihood, with a focus on Latin America.

When it comes to products, we minimize our footprint and always explore new ways to be forward-thinking by using repurposed, recycled, and responsibly sourced materials. Our Del Día Collection uses only repurposed fabrics, which helps keep good material out of the landfill. All our down insulation products are Responsible Down Standard certified. By 2025, our goal is to use repurposed, recycled, or responsibly sourced materials in 100% of our products.

To meet the highest standards of supply chain transparency, we share our factories publicly and conduct ongoing due diligence and collaborative programming to ensure workers are treated with dignity. We also award grants to our major factories to support worker-led programs like organic gardens, university scholarships, and employee carpooling.

Best in Down

The Responsible Down Standard provides consumers with a guarantee that the insulated products they're purchasing are made responsibly.

We're obsessed with making our jackets as great as possible, inside and out. That's why every style in our insulation collection is Responsible Down Standard (RDS) certified.

The RDS is an independent, voluntary standard that recognizes best practices in animal welfare and ensures the down and features used in a product are ethically sourced.

To be RDS certified, a product must come from a transparent, audited supply chain that prioritizes the humane treatment of ducks and geese.
